For people not familiar with the words of Springsteen songs more subtitles needed.</li></ul>

- Perfect viewing for miserable Winter evening. Easy, light-hearted watch with predictable storyline but great soundtrack.
- I thought it a powerful film, that enabled you to see like in UK from another perspective. It was also beautifully acted. Very good.
- An enjoyable film, especially all the cultural reference such as huge mobile phone, mullet hairstyles etc!
- Excellent portrayal of difficult relationships. How did Javed learn to drive? I can't imagine his Dad teaching him and surely they couldn't afford lessons? Maybe I am going by today's prices!
- A well-made, lively and attractive 'coming of age' film, with a great soundtrack for Bruce Springsteen fans. Interesting use of graphics showing the lyrics as Javed listened to them. Although some of the key characters were under-developed, there were many excellent cameos including Mr Evans, Emma, Colin Hand and Eliza's parents. Looked good too.
- Light hearted look at some serious issues, but helped me empathize with cultural dilemmas. Third viewing just as enjoyable.
- I thought it was a Good film and enjoyed it.
- Very good - unfortunately the problems depicted don't seem to have been resolved.
- A thoughtful and inspiring film with which to start a new year.
- Fantastic feel good with a reminder of how awful the NF was and is. Great use of the music with suitable gentle humour that was sympathetic and not mocking.
- Very Good. Well-crafted. Typical clever British romcom - funny, entertaining yet poignant and thoughtful. Thank you, committee, for setting a good tone on a wet, January night.
- Extremely good. More like this one please.
- I enjoyed the film despite the clichés. It was nice to come out smiling and still singing the songs.

- A really good film. Amongst the best we've seen. It showed a bleak side of Britain at the time and the division between cultures, mainly perpetrated by racist idiots. Thankfully we have moved on somewhat. Great courage and dignity showed by Javed's family. Brilliant music throughout. It was heartwarming to see the family reconciled at the end. A well told story. Thank you for showing it.
- All good, the acting, the story line, all the cast. Some very moving moments particularly when father and mother were doing business in the pawn brokers. Brilliant insights into relationships. Thank you committee for showing this film.
- We enjoyed it and had a good cry!
- Better than good!
- Tramps like us, baby, we were born to run and like this film. Good fun.
- Nice depiction of a coming-of-age story with a twist. Possibly slightly too long, maybe one or two too many singalongs, but its heart was in the right place and was certainly enjoyable and uplifting.
- Enjoyable.
- I enjoyed the film, and great to see a film showing an aspect of life for young people in the 1980s, in Luton.
