

Review – The Producers

Good – 11	OK – 6	Poor – 3
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> We both thought it was great fun and, even though we have seen the film several times, it made us laugh out loud. A great evening out. It made me laugh all the way through. So nice to see all the political incorrectness. Could not make it now! Ageism, racism, 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Sometimes I think American humour can be a bit over the top and did feel this was the case in this film. I liked the German writer. He really was funny. It was amusing and actually quite thought provoking about the suitability of things that can be made a joke of. The danger was that by making Hitler a laughing stock it took the sting out of his evilness and he seemed like a silly little man who was too 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Probably a good film at the time but sadly uncomfortable to view now. The humour was dated with just the occasional

sexism, great, loved it! <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Crazy, mad, hilarious fun. Laughed all the way through.• Lighthearted and awful!• Very good.• I thought the film was better than good, and I enjoyed it very much and am still smiling when thinking of the superbly manic scenes. So funny.• Pitch-perfect performances all round, great script (and music!), and very assured direction for a first film. One of my all-time favourites, so lovely to see it on a big screen again - thank you.• One of a few films I've seen multiple times. This time I found myself more shocked than I could remember before - mainly by the content of the stage performance. Nonetheless I enjoyed the acting and found it very funny.	stupid to do any harm. A strange view of the show biz world with characters like Max, the director and his assistant and the Hitler actor. Also the gyrating Swede! My favourite character was actually the mad German. <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Films are often better in your memory. This is an example. How humour has changed in fifty years! First half very slow with lots of overacting but from the theatre performance onwards much better. So overall, ok.• Please ask the projectionist to set the volume a bit lower!• A bit over the top but OK.	funny scene.
